EXTREMELY palatable, and a sure cure for ill malarial diseases, is Dr. Leslie's Quinine FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

Anna Dickinson has not forgotten all fem-Miss Dorothea Dix, the philanthropist, lying dangerously ill at her hospital home in New Jersey. A St. Louis young woman draws the eye of all the avenue with cape of leopard skin.

Queen Victoria will remain at Osborne for a month, and then return to Windsor Castle and stay there till April. Miss Couzins asks for equal rights with men, and then complains of the accommoda-tions for women at the capitol. A good many young men don't know that meals a day when she has ally entered upon matrimony.

A terrible New York woman, who threshes her husband, has been required to give bond Richmond, Virginia, has no decided belle, the sore distress of poverty.

Governor Gear, of Iowa, said to a friend on retiring from office last Friday. "I am going home and going to work to earn a living. I am $5000 poorer to-night than when I came to DesMoines." And yet it is admitted that Governor Gear lived only as the executive officer of the State ought to live, unpostentialiously at that.

Richmond, Virginia, has no decided belle, nor beauty, nor heiress. The pretriest maiden in the city is Miss Bessie Powell, the most gifted Miss Matoica Gay.

the executive officer of the State ought to live, unostentatiously at that.

Mr. Sartsin, the venerable engraver, is perhaps the happiest old gentleman in America. He enjoys his work as if he were still a boy, and is often found at midnight bending over his beloved tools. He works for hours together, and is as fresh and spontaneous and mirthful in feeling as in the almost forgotten days, when Sartain's Maguzine was a household oracle.

Congressman Moore, of Tennessee, as he sat in the House the other day, saw looming up before him an autograph album in the hands of a small page. Supposing the book to be the boy's own, he wrote in it this paternal sentiment: "Be a good boy and you'll be a good man." Mr. Moore was shortly after pleased to hear that the album belonged to an officer of the House, the venerable father of a family.

Oscar Wilde and Walt Whitman met with enthusiasm and milk punch Wednesday. The Englishman tenderly adjured the American to call him "Oscar;" and his elder said that "Oscar" seemed to him "like a great big, splendid boy." Mr. Wilde expounded at great length the esthetic theories, and Mr. Whitman observed: "I wish well to you. Oscar; and as to the esthetes, I can only say that you are young and ardent and the field is wide, and if you want my advice, I say go shead." Then they took some more milk punch, and dreamed of faint lilies.
